THE CONCEPT

The Joy of Living and the Winemaking Art is always the inspiration behind the Candoni outstanding label design. The front images on the labels depict Etruscan pottery vessels in the shape of an animal, that were used for pouring wine. They are surrounded by a lush nature where grapevines and ivy with berries plants are embraced together. The Etruscans lived in Italy before the Romans more than 2,500 years ago and they were the first wine growers in Italy. They cultivated vines in the same manner they saw these plants grow wild in the woods. The vine is a climbing shrub, a species of liana. In the woods, its natural environment, it tends to climb up a tree to reach the light as possible. Today the Etruscan cultivation system name is "married vine", "vite maritata" in Italian. The vine is "married" to the tree.
